T-Systems appoints David Andrews to Vice President of ICT-Operations and Member of the Management Board in North America

T-Systems, the business-to-business Information and Communications Technologies (ICT) unit of Deutsche Telekom, has appointed David Andrews to its North America Management Board as vice president, ICT-Operations.

He comes to this new position from his most recent roles as the T-Systems account executive for Volkswagen in the Americas and Africa regions as well as the Managing Director of T-Systems Argentina, where he led the company's local restructuring activities.

"David's breadth of experience and understanding of the T-Systems global organization makes him a strong addition to the TSNA executive team," said Heike Auerbach, Managing Director, T-Systems in North America.

"His first priority will be to ensure that the North American delivery activities related to recently announced global contracts with BP and Phillips are successfully transitioned to T-Systems."

David has more than 15 years of broad-based experience in the Information Technology industry across the sales, account management, service management, and delivery functions. He joined T-Systems UK in 2001 as the Head of Service Management and Desktop Services. Since that time, David has held a number of global positions with increasing levels of responsibility within T-Systems.

His appointment was effective January 1, 2010.
